Einführung in die Metaphysik : Henri Bergson - Internet Archive

Abstract. The topic to be addressed in this paper, that is, the distinction between the 'concept' of time and the being of the clock, divides into two parts: first, in the debate between Albert Einstein and Henri Bergson, one discovers the ground for the diverging concepts of time characterized by physics in its opposing itself to philosophy.

Henri Bergson. an analogy. Paul Ardoin. 229. In Matter and Memory. • he does not thereby state that the being of matter is reducible to what is actually perceived. matter is not essentially different than the perceived. but also unlike the realist thing insofar as it is not entirely different in itself from the perception that one has of it. Bergson argues that matter is like the realist thing insofar as it exists independently of the consciousness that perceives it. So. In short.
