"Ukrainians and Cities 1861-1917. Not so Rural. Not so Russified

Nationalism, National Separatism, and the Russian Question National factors in history Historians studying the genesis and development of the "great" and "powerful" Soviet Union, as it was described in its anthem, have had to work rather hard to explain the causes of the swift collapse, in late 1991, of this seemingly stable world superpower-essentially the most important geopolitical event of the twentieth century. True, the principal features of this event are quite clear, and one ...
