Temple Architecture and Sculpture The basic form of the Hindu temples The basic form of the Hindu temple comprises the following: i. A cave-like sanctum (garbhagriha literally "womb-house"), which, in the early temples, was a small cubicle with a single entrance and grew into a larger chamber in time. The garbhagriha is made to house the main icon which is itself the focus of much ritual attention. ii. The entrance to the temple which may be a portico or colonnaded hall that incorporates ...
